Our National Silver Currency. The Washington States and Union has originated a paragraph which is now going the rounds of the press, containing one or two very grave errors, calculated to bring undescreed discredit you American allver coins. In representing the advantages to e derived from the treaty with Mexico, new before the Senate, In the second place, it will speedily score to us a pure silver currency instead of the adulterated coin which is now in use, and the impurity of which prevents it from being a coupled in the payment of debts as a lawful tender. It is thus intelligently replied to by the commercial editor of the New York Journal of Commerce: There is no such thing as a pure silver currency known in th There is no such thing as a pure silver currency known in the world. We believe the nearest to it is the Japanese Rocku, worth 37 cents of our money, which is 801-1000ths fine.

The impression conveyed in the above extract, that the United States silver coins have been more adulterated of late years than formerly, is tetally without foundation in fact. The standard of fineness which has been legally established in this country, for a very long period, is 900-1000ths ince for both gold and silver coin. The old Spunish pillar dollar is of the same fineness, and the Nexican dollar is within a alight fraction of the same, a late away falling a lille below 201-1000ths fine.

It is difficult, therefore, to see how any freaty with Mexico. It is difficult, therefore, to see how any treaty with Mexico an their face, being saleable as bullion at about $1.04 to the do iar, and the country was this drained of lis silver change. To obviate this difficulty, Congress, in 1833, reduced the weight of the half dellar, quarter-dellar, dime and half-dime, about seven pecent, seaving the shallar unchanged. The following will show the selative old and new weight:
